

A man in a black t-shirt and dark pants stands behind a large, white, diamond-patterned leather screen. He is looking through the screen and holding a small object. The screen is suspended from the ceiling by two thin wires and has a silver frame. In the background, there is a bed with a grey and white patterned blanket, a small white table with a candle and books, and a grey sofa. The room has light-colored walls and a wooden floor.

About

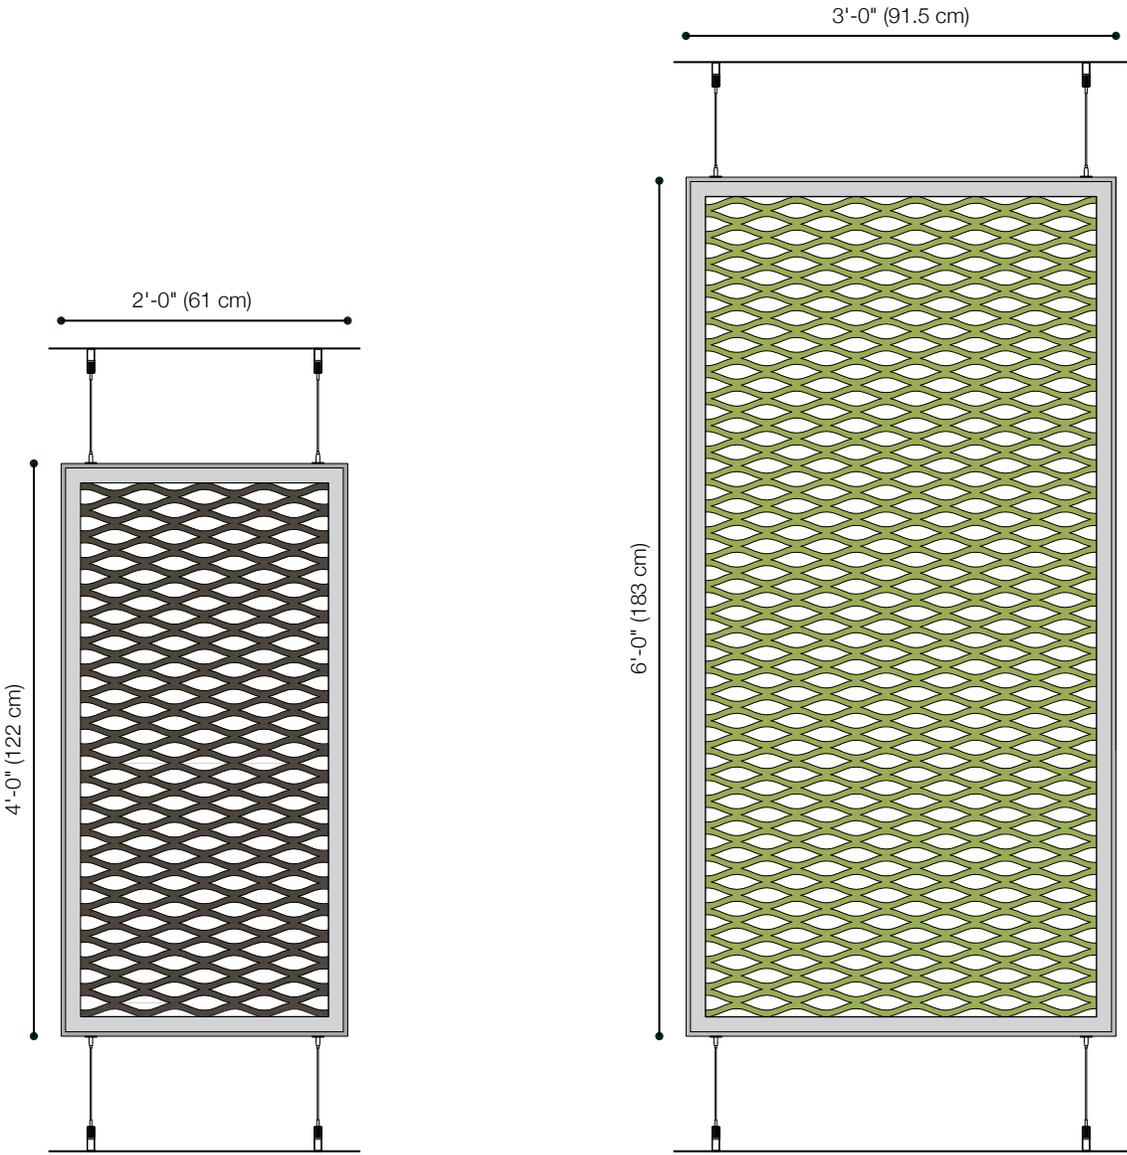

Tratto, meaning traction or stretch in Italian, is a unique screen made from stretched CNC cut Belting Leather held in traction within an aluminum frame. Designed by noted architect, Emanuela Frattini Magnusson, the screen acts as an impactful feature wall or space divider in 26 colors of Belting Leather. The leather is sliced and stretched creating sculptural shapes with an interesting play of positive and negative space. The screen affords space separation without blocking light or sight lines and is materially efficient since it stretches the leather to more than twice its length.

Appropriate for contract, hospitality, and residential environments, Tratto is available in several standard widths and heights and multiple screens may be linked together. The screening system ships complete with top and bottom suspension hardware as well as suspension cable that may be cut to length to accommodate varying existing conditions.
